Ivan the Terrible

Probably one of the most famous figures in Russian history is Ivan IV, called the Terrible because of his cruelty. He ruled in the period when boyars, Russian hereditary landlords, were fast losing their political power, their lands, and sometimes, due to Ivan IV, their lives. On the other hand, more and more power was given to dvoryane, service landlords.

The three –year-old Ivan IV became grand prince in 1533, after the death of his father, Vasiliy III. At first his mother, Yelena Glinsky, ruled instead of his son. After her death in 1538 the Shuiskys and Belskys struggled for the throne. In 1547 Ivan IV was crowned tsar of all Russia. In 1549 the first zemsky sobor was held.

Ivan IV decided that all landowners should begin military service when they were 15, and serve till the end of their lives. He created also a standing army, streletsy. This was necessary because Russia had many enemies. Tatars of Kazan, Astrakhan and the Crimea continued to raid the territory of Russia. The Livonian knights blocked Russia's access to the Baltic Sea.

Ivan first began a campaign against Kazan and defeated it in 1552. In 1554-1556 his armies took Astrakhan, thus getting for Russia the Volga Valley and the way to the Caspian Sea.

The tsar's chief interest lay in trade with the West through the Baltic. He began a war against Livonia which lasted 24 years and ended in nothing: in the end Russia lost everything it had conquered earlier during the war.

In 1553, Ivan fell seriously ill. Thinking he was close to death, he wanted boyars to give an oath in their loyalty to his son Dmitry. Boyars didn't want to; moreover, one of them a close companion of Ivan IV, suddenly escaped to Lithuania. Ivan IV left Moscow for the town of Alexandrov, and set up a state within the state, called "Oprichnina". The rest of the land was called "Zemshchina", where the boyar Duma continued to govern. He also organized a new guard Oprichniki, who were famous for their cruelty. They numbered several thousands and killed many boyars and other people Ivan thought of as enemies. They also confiscated their property. The Oprichniki were ordered to wipe out "treason" in both Oprichnina and Zemshchina. Ivan's cruelty led to a number of risings. The Oprichnina was abolished in 1572.

Ivan died in 1584. Though known for his cruelty, he is also famous for getting for Russia access to the Baltic and for beginning the struggle with boyars, who were hereditary landlords, for the power of dvoryane, service landlords. He is undoubtedly one of the most famous figures in Russian history.

He was a healthy, lively and clever child. He loved military games and enjoyed carpentry, blacksmithing and printing. At the age of 17 he was married.

Peter 1 is famous for drawing Russia further to the East. He also transferred the capital from Moscow to St. Petersburg. Peter traveled much in Western Europe and tried to carry western customs and habits to Russia. He introduced western technology. He completely changed the Russian government and military system: he increased the power of the monarch and reduced the power of the boyars and the church.

In foreign policy, Peter 1 waged a war with Turkey (1695-1696) and the Great Northern War with Sweden (1700- 1721), and a war with Persia (1722-1723). In these wars, he wanted to get access to the Baltic, the Black Sea and The Caspian Sea. He managed to get the shores of the Baltic Sea and the Caspian Sea.

It is anti-democratic – and brings Britain back. People don't differentiate between the words "monarchy" and "royal family". The young royals spoiled the reputation of the monarchy very much. Despite the anti-monarchical feeling that exists in the country, however, it is still hard to discover a strong movement toward a republic in Britain. The Independent, one of the Britain's most respected broadsheet newspapers that started the debate on this issue, still favours the retention (сохранение) of Queen Elizabeth as the head of state until her death.

Winston Churchill often described parliamentary democracy and constitutional monarch as not perfect – but the best that the man had yet created. It is human nature to need a leader in the helm (шлем).

The Queen has powers that can surprise many. She can choose a Prime Minister, dissolve (распустить) Parliament and declare war like an absolute monarch. But in reality, she does not have these powers and acts under the tradition on the advice of Parliament. It has prevented a dictator from ruling Great Britain since Oliver Cromwell's short period in the 17th century.

The British monarch has served both the Empire and the Commonwealth. Queen Elizabeth is the head of state not only of one small island nation, but also of the 53 nations of the Commonwealth, with the population of 1,5 billion. In short, she is the head of state to more than one quarter of the earth's inhabitants. It evokes a sense of unity between nations.

What are the arguments for and against monarchy?

Under the Constitution Russia is a presidential republic. The federal government consists of three branches: legislative, executive and judicial. Each of them is checked and balanced by the President.

The legislative power is vested in the Federal Assembly. It consists of two chambers. The Upper Chamber is the Council of Federation, the Lower Chamber is the State Duma.

Each chamber is headed by the Speaker. Legislation may be initiated in either of the two Chambers. But to become a law a bill must be approved by both Chambers and signed by the President. The President may veto the bill.

The President is commander-in-chief of the armed forces, he makes treaties, enforces laws, appoints ministers to be approved by the Federal Assembly.

The executive power belongs to the Government which is headed by the Prime Minister. The first action of the Prime Minister on appointment is to form the Cabinet.

The Judicial branch is represented by the Constitutional Court, the Supreme Court and the regional courts.

The members of the Federal Assembly are elected by popular vote for a four-year-period.

Director: Well Mr. Fox, I'd like to hear your evaluation of the present position of our major product on the market.

Manager: The situation on the market nowadays is generally characterized by much more stringent requirements to chemical products, due to growing environmental pollution control. In this connection we'll probably have to give up using raw materials containing phosphates¹ for our production, since the demand for such products is gradually declining.

Director: The situation seems really serious. What are your suggestions in the circumstances?

Manager: In the first place, we'll have to work out a new chemical composition² for our products and carry out a number of tests, which is a regular procedure for new products. Then some serious changes will have to be made in our technology.

Director: I'm afraid; the change-over to new products will require a lot of expenses.

Manager: No doubt, but the new investments will certainly be repaid. And we should not forget that in future there may be no demand for phosphates-based products at all. Some countries have already imposed state restrictions on the production of such materials.

Director: Well, I'll get our planning department to make an estimate of our expenses and submit it for approval. Now, let's look at the problem from another point of view. I understand, new products will be positioned on the market at higher prices.

Manager: The new materials will certainly be more expensive. But we'll get products of much higher quality, which will be in great demand on the market and may be sold at higher prices.

Director: The new products will require a wide advertising campaign to support them on the market. Have you given thought as to how it should be arranged?

Manager: I believe we could use both — press advertisements and tele- and radio-advertising. But it's not my line, actually.

Director: No, but I just wondered. I will instruct our advertising department to think it over and come out with their suggestions.

WHAT IS A MANAGER?

A number of different terms are used for «manager», including «director», «administrator» and «president». The term «manager» is used more frequently in profit-making organizations, while the others are used more widely in government and non-profit organizations such as universities, hospitals and social work agencies.

What, then, is a manager?

When used collectively¹ the term «management» refers to those people who are responsible for making and carrying out decisions within the system.

An individual manager is a person who directly supervises people in an organization.

Some basic characteristics seem to apply to managers in all types of organizations; they include hard work on a variety of activities, preference for active tasks, direct personal relationships.

Almost everything a manager does involve decisions. The reason for making a decision is that a problem exists. In decision making there is always some uncertainty and risk.

Managing is a hard job. There is a lot to be done and relatively little time to do it. The engineer can finish a design on a particular day, and the lawyer can work or lose a case² at a certain time. But the manager's job is like «Old Man River»³ — it just keeps going.

Notes:

1. collectively — в собирательном значении

2. case — зд. дело

3. «Old Man River» — the name of a song.

b) Think and answer

1. What individual managers make up management in an organization?
2. What concrete activities is a production manager (financial manager, personnel manager, marketing manager) responsible for?
3. What type of information does a manager need to make decisions?

4. What magazines (reference books, etc.) does a manager have to see on a regular basis?

Task 10. Read and translate the text

MANAGEMENT

Management is the art of getting things done through other people. It includes the personnel who have the right to make decisions that influence company's affairs.

There are three management levels: top management, middle management and, operating management. Top management includes the president, vice presidents, and the general manager. Middle management includes department managers and plant managers. Operating management includes supervisors, foremen, etc.

The most important responsibility of any manager is decision making. Successful management is a skill of choosing from alternatives.

Decision makings are divided into: recognizing the problem, defining and analyzing the problem, evaluating alternative solutions, choosing the most favourable solution and implementing the approach chosen.

Management functions are planning, organizing, directing, controlling, staffing and innovating. It should be noted that successful management is based on three basic elements: leadership, motivation and communication.

To operate a successful business one should have management skills because effective management is the key to business success.

Task 11. Read and translate

KEY TRAITS OF SUCCESSFUL LEADERS

The most important contribution that psychology has made to the field of business over the past years has been in determining the key traits of acknowledged leaders. Psychological tests have been used to determine what characteristics are commonly noted among successful leaders. This list of characteristics can be used for developmental purposes to help managers gain insight and develop their leadership skills.

The increasing rate of change in the business environment is a major factor in this new emphasis on leadership. While in the past, managers were expected to maintain the status quo in order to move ahead, new forces in the marketplace have made it necessary to expand this narrow focus. The new leaders of tomorrow are visionaries. They are both learners and teachers. Not only do they foresee important changes in society, but they also have high ethical qualities and work to build integrity in their organizations.

The traits of an effective leader include the following:

1. Emotional stability. Good leaders must be able to tolerate frustration and stress.
2. Dominance. Leaders are often competitive and decisive and usually enjoy overcoming obstacles. Overall, they are assertive in their thinking style as well as their attitude in dealing with others.
3. Enthusiasm. Leaders are usually seen as active, expressive. They are often very optimistic and open to change. Overall, they are generally quick and alert.
4. Honesty. Leaders are often dominated by a sense of duty. They usually have a very high standard of excellence and an inward desire to do one's best. They also have a need for order and tend to be very self-disciplined.
5. Bravery. Leaders tend to be spontaneous risk-takers. They are usually socially aggressive and generally thick-skinned. Nevertheless, they are responsive to others and have high emotional stamina.
6. Practicality. Good leaders are practical and logical. They tend to be low in sentimental attachments and comfortable with criticism. They are usually intensive to hardship.

7. Self-assurance. Self-confidence is a common trait among leaders. They tend to have little or no need for approval. They are generally secure and free from guilt and are usually unaffected by prior mistakes.
8. Prudence. Leaders were found to be controlled and very precise in their social interactions. Overall, they are very protective of their reputation and consequently tend to be aware of what happens.

Beyond basic traits, leaders of today have to be able to motivate others and lead them in new directions. Leaders of the future must be able to envision the future and convince others that their vision is right. To do this, they must have the following personality traits:

1. High energy. Long hours and travel are usually a prerequisite for leadership positions, especially when a company grows. Remaining alert and staying focused are two of the greatest obstacles one will have to face as a leader.
2. Intuitiveness. Rapid changes in the world today combined with information overload result in an inability to “know” everything. In fact, more and more leaders are using their intuition and trusting it when making decisions.
3. Maturity. To be a good leader, personal power and recognition must be secondary to the development of your employees. In other words, maturity is based on recognizing that more can be accomplished by empowering others than can be by ruling others.
4. Team orientation. Business leaders today put a strong emphasis on team work. Instead of promoting an adult and child relationship with their employees, leaders create an adult/ adult relationship, which fosters team cohesiveness.
5. Empathy. Being able to “put yourself in the other’s person’s shoes” is a key trait of leaders today. Without empathy, you can’t build trust. And without trust you will never be able to get the best effort from your employees.
6. Charisma. People usually perceive leaders as special people. Charisma plays a large part in this perception. Leaders who have charisma are able to arose strong emotions in their employees.

Leaders are rarely born. Circumstances and persistence are major components in the developmental process of any leader. So if your goal is to become a leader, work on developing those areas of your personality that you feel are not up to “leader standard”.

How to apply for a job: Curriculum Vitae/ CV/ Resume

A Curriculum Vitae (CV) or resume is a summary of your educational and academic background. Its purpose is to outline your credentials for a professional position, a research fellowship or an academic grant within a few pages (max. 1-2 pages if not stated otherwise). We want to help you to write a professional CV and an accompanying cover letter. The following pages give suggestions and help on how they should be written.

Points you should consider when writing a CV or resume

Your CV may get as little as 30-60 seconds of consideration by a potential employer. Therefore, an effective vita must be able to attract (positive) attention, stimulate the reader's interest, create a desire to get to know you better and generate action.

To maximize effectiveness it should be:

- Clear (well organized, readable, easily understandable)
- Concise (no double entries, brief)
- Complete (all relevant information should be included)
- Consistent (no mix of styles, same order in presenting)
- Current (include dates with all information; revise CV at least once a year)

Finally while the content is critical, you should also be conscious of the image you present with this document. Remember that your CV may be your first contact with an employer or grant reviewer. So it needs to be visually appealing and should not contain any typographical or grammatical errors.

What you should include in your CV or resume

The categories listed below are often included in CV's or resumes. However, no CV contains all of them, and some CVs will contain other categories that are not listed here. The basic rule is that your own unique educational and work experiences should be presented to best effect.

The first step in actually developing your CV is to write down all relevant information - later you can organize it into categories. After you have written down all relevant information develop a hierarchy placing the most important and relevant categories and information first. All other information can be listed in descending order of importance and relevance.

The relevancy of information varies strongly. It is a good idea to try to see yourself with the eyes of your potential employer: When you are applying for a job as an illustrator your high school art classes might be relevant. If you are applying for an internship at a banking house they probably are not.

Possible section to include in your CV or resume:

- Application information
- Educational career
- Relevant Experience (work experience, internships, ...)
- Other experience (volunteer work, commitments,...)
- Languages and international travel
- Computer and Office Skills
- Other-Memberships, Associations, Conferences
- References (on demand)
- Photo (on demand)

Following additional information might be of interest as well, esp. when applying for an academic position or grant.

- Dissertation Title and Advisor
- Certification (s) Awards/ Honors/ Patents
- Grants received
- Publications and Presentations

Application Information

Your name should appear on the top of each page.

Include your personal data: name, date of birth (year, month, day), place of birth (city, country), nationality, address, phone & fax number (including area codes) and e-mail address (only if you check your mail regularly).

Educational career

In reserve chronological order list all of your degrees from college on, with the name of institution and date they were awarded. List the date you expect to receive the degree the program you are currently in.

If you are applying for an academic position or grant it is standard to list the name of your advisor and your thesis title.

If you are applying for a professional position only mention it, if it is of relevance.

Relevant experience

Listing of position (Part-time, full-time, temporary and permanent), which relate to the type of work sought.

Include: department/ firm/ agency/ organization; complete name, city and state; job/ position title; dates; also include a brief description of your activities/ duties.

Other experience

Groupings of kinds of other experiences (including volunteer work and/ or internships) can enhance your CV.

Languages and international travel

For each language including your mother tongue indicate fluency level of spoken and written language ability as well as reading skills using the following criteria: fair/ basic knowledge, working knowledge, fluent or excellent knowledge.

Mention any certificates or attended language studies. International travel, language exchanges and extended stays abroad are of great importance, as they prove your ability to adapt and your interest in the world.

References (on demand)

It is quite usual to include reference letters from former employers in your application. Do not send originals, send high quality copies.

Sometimes an employer will ask for personal references. Compile a list of three persons, who are not related to you (along with their telephone/ fax number, address and occupation) and can be contacted in case of enquiries. They must be familiar with your professional qualifications and your character.

It is sufficient to communicate the list, when your potential employer asks for it.

Photo

Opinion is divided, check the job posting: some companies insist on a photo, some particularly discourage applicants from including one.

It is totally acceptable to integrate a color scan into the CV.

If you choose to send a photo it might be an idea to not attach it: If the company wants to, they can remove it from your CV. Write your name and contact information at the back. Just in case they change their mind.

Certification(s) Awards/Honors/Patents

List all areas of certification relevant to the position; include: type, year received.

Grants

Include name of grant; name of granting agency; date received; title or purpose of research project.

NB! CV (curriculum vitae) = Resume = Brief personal history

To begin your job search in the USA, you must identify the kind of job you want, where the jobs are and what employers expect.

If you are a student or a graduate of a vocational, technical or professional (university) training programme and you have the same interests, you already know the kind of job you want.

Begin by thinking about the work you can do. Include the work you have been trained to do, work you have actually done and work you enjoy doing.

Next, talk to as many people as possible about your job interests and concerns.

Thinking and talking help you build a network of people interested in helping you.

This network will lead to specific job contacts.

However job counseling is also useful.

Job counseling is a professional service that may include vocational interest and aptitude testing; informing and advising about particular jobs; and providing training and guidance in the various steps at job search.

Most employers will not hire people who are not dependable or who cannot get along with others.

Thus, they want to learn as much as possible about the skills, dependability and personal characteristics of prospective employees.

Depending on the job you are applying for, you might have to complete an application form, participate in one or more employment interviews, submit a resume, take a test, have a physical examination or submit references, samples of your work and copies of your school records.

Each of these steps in the employment process provides the employer with important information about you.

Many people believe that answering newspaper want ads is the best method to use.

Job advertisements are found in the classified advertising section of newspapers.

Wants ads are also found in professional journals.

There are two main types of want ads: "Help wanted" and "Jobs wanted".

You should read want ads for two reasons: first, to learn more general information about jobs that are available; second, to learn specific information about a particular job that is of interest to you.

An ad may tell the education and work experience that are required for the job, the location of the job, the working hours and the pay.

It also tells you how to apply for the particular job.

Avoid ads that make unrealistic offers.

If an ad suggests that you will make a lot of money quickly and easily, do not apply for that job.

Jobs and Career

In Britain when a pupil leaves school at sixteen or later he or she must find a job. To achieve this goal school leavers without special qualification will probably visit a Job Centre or look through local newspaper advertisements. School careers officers can offer advice. But ultimately it is up to the boys and girls themselves to find work.

Graduates from universities and other colleges are in the same position except that they are older and are looking for different kinds of work. Usually they start their search near the beginning of their third (i.e. final) year in college. The professional work many of them seek normally requires further specialized training, so the first step is to get a place on a training course and a grant or some other funds to pay for the course. Probably the first stage will involve some kind of exam and an interview – necessary procedures for choosing which applicants shall be given place on the course which may lead to a job in the end. (Such courses are essential for librarians, computer programmers, social workers, accountants and many other kinds of qualified workers.) Certain organizations take graduates directly and train them while they are working - for example the BBC. A recruitment committee has to read through the papers and select maybe eight or ten applicants for interview. At the interview they will be asked their reasons for wanting the job, and have to answer questions about their academic career, other activities and – often – questions which seem to have no point but which are intended to reveal their personality, skills and general suitability for the job.

Eventually someone will be selected. If the fortunate candidate is not happy with all the conditions of the job (pay, hours of work, pension rights and so on) he doesn't have to accept it – but once he has signed the contract he cannot leave the job without giving notice (of maybe three or six months) and he cannot be thrown out of the job without notice and without good reason.

Today graduates can expect to make dozens of applications for jobs and get short-listed for interviews two or three times before they find satisfactory work. Some of course know exactly what they want and manage to find the right job first time, but more often graduates can spend months searching, meanwhile earning enough to pay the rent by washing dishes or some other short-term work.

Having found your job, you certainly do not expect to stay in it for life – or even more than a few years. Whether they are working in private industry or in the state sector, people assume that if they want more money or more responsibility they must expect to move from one employer to another or from one area of work to another. Promotion up the steps of the ladder within a firm certainly happens, but the advantages to both employer and employee – stability, familiarity with the work, confidence, loyalty to the firm and its workers – must set against the advantages of bringing in “fresh blood”, new challenging ways of approaching the work (avoidance of intrigues and resentment among those already in the organization about the promotion of one over the other) and the hard work that can be expected from someone new in the job who has to “prove” himself or herself. In practice promotions are usually a mixture of “within-house” and from outside. Consequently, employees who want to improve their position start looking for other jobs within few years of securing their first one.

Great BRITISH Jobs

1. Modern butlers combine the roles of cook, cleaner, waiter, gardener, driver and household manager and they have to be polite, respectful, and well-organized, “We do everything from paying the bills to picking up the children, organizing parties and getting the washing machine repaired.” Says Shaun Harrison, who works for a family in the Oxford shire countryside. “During the week I’m in jeans and a shirt, busy looking after the household and in the gardens. At the weekends, when the family arrives, I put on a suit and take on the role of a traditional butler. I get four weeks holiday a year and I have to take it when it suits my employer.”
2. Mark Thompson is self-employed and carries out a range of building, repair and maintenance jobs to the outside of tall structures such as church spires, monuments, industrial chimneys and high rise buildings. It takes from 2-6 years to train as a professional steeplejack and Mark has been doing it for the last 15 years. “The one thing you must have for this job is a head for heights,” he says. “I like working outdoors, but it can be very dangerous carrying equipment and trying to keep your balance when the weather's bad. It gets really windy up there, so you've got to be quite fearless!" Mark travels all over the country and often works away from home for extended periods, so that because of him beautiful buildings will continue to grace the skyline for a good few years.

3. The job of Town Crier can be traced back as far as the Battle of Hastings in 1066 when the news was passed on to the general public by individuals employed by the king. "Basically, A Town Crier was a kind of talking newspaper, but today a lot of my work is ceremonial," says Peter Moore. "I wear a traditional costume and carry a bell and shout the familiar call of "Oyez! Oyez!" (Listen! Listen!) to get people's attention. I work for the British Tourist Authority and I preside at festivals, shows and parades as well as London's tourist attractions."

4. Rick Booth is one of a decreasing number of milkmen still working in Britain. He arrives at the dairy around 11.00 pm to load up his milk float and it takes him about five hours to complete his round. He leaves the milk on the doorstep and collects the empty bottles left there by the householders. By the morning, Rick's hands are sore and blistered. It also strains his knees and back. Angry pets are another problem. The other problem is the unsociable hours.

Task 21. Answer the questions

1. Why do you think these jobs are in danger of disappearing?
2. Which traditional jobs in your country are in danger of disappearing? Why is this happening?

Living by the sword

When Cristina Sanchez told her parents that she wanted to become a bullfighter instead of a hairdresser, they weren't too pleased. But when she was eighteen her parents realized that she was serious and sent her to a bullfighting school in Madrid, where she trained with professionals. Since last July, Sanchez has been the most successful novice in Spain and is very popular with the crowds. After brilliant performances in Latin America and Spain earlier this year, Sanchez has decided that she is ready to take the test to become a matador de toros. Out of the ring, Sanchez does not look like a matador. She is casually elegant, very feminine and wears her long hair loose. She seems to move much more like a dancer than an athlete, but in the ring she is all power.

When she was fourteen, Sanchez's father warned her that the world of bullfighting was hard enough for a man and even harder for a woman. It seems he is right. "It really is a tough world for a woman", says Sanchez. "You start with the door shut in your face. A man has to prove himself only once, whereas I have had to do it ten times just to get my foot in the door."

In perhaps the world's most masculine profession, it would seem strange if Sanchez had not met problems. But even though Spanish women won the legal right to fight bulls on equal terms with men in 1974, there are still matadors like Jesulin de Ubrique who refuse to fight in the same ring as her.

Sanchez lives with her family in Perla, south of Madrid. Her family is everything to her and is the main support in her life. "my sisters don't like bullfighting, they don't even watch it on TV, and my mother would be the happiest person in the world if I gave it up. But we get on well. Mum's like my best friend."

When Sanchez is not fighting she has a tough fitness routine – running, working out in the gym and practicing with her father in the afternoon. By nine she is home for supper, and by eleven she is not in bed. She doesn't drink, smoke or socialise. "You have to give up a lot," says

Sanchez. "It's difficult to meet people, but it doesn't worry me – love does not arrive because you look for it."

37

Sanchez spends most of the year traveling: in summer to Spanish and French bullfights and in winter to Latin America. Her mother dislikes watching Sanchez fight, but goes to the ring when she can, if not, she waits at home next to the television. Her husband has had to ring three times to say that their daughter had been injured, twice lightly in the leg and once seriously in the stomach. After she has been wounded, the only thing Sanchez thinks about is how quickly she can get back to the ring. "It damages your confidence," she says "but it also makes you mature. It's just unprofessional to be injured. You cannot let it happen." Sanchez is managed by Simon Casas, who says, "At the moment there is no limit to where she can go. She has a champion's mentality, as well as courage and technique."

1 When Sanchez told her parents that she wanted to be a bullfighter they

- a. felt a little pleased

- a. living in today's world is difficult for a woman.
- b. bullfighting is a difficult career for women
- c. it is impossible to succeed as a female bullfighter
- d. women have to demonstrate their skills as much as male bullfighters do.

3 Sanchez's mother

- a. is everything to the family
- b. prefers to watch her daughter on TV
- c. supports her more than the rest of her family
- d. would prefer Cristina to leave the ring

4 What does "it" in line 37 refer to?

- a. the fitness routine
- b. not socializing
- c. giving up
- d. smoking

5 Sanchez does not socialize often because

- a. she doesn't like cigarettes and alcohol
- b. her work takes up most of her time
- c. she is worried about meeting people
- d. it's too difficult to look for friends

6 What does Sanchez think about after being injured?

- a. her next chance to fight bulls
- b. her abilities

- c. her development
- d. her skills

TRICKY JOBS

How many of us used to dream of joining the circus when we were children? Well, Chris Sayers, a trapeze artist at Zippo's Circus, did just that. It took him ten years of training before he left confident enough to perform six metres above the ground. Since then he has become one of the few people in the world who can do four somersaults one after the other. There are many risks involved in this job. Trapeze artists need to work with a partner they can depend on. When flying through the air at 60 mph, they have to be sure their partner will catch them. "many times in the past, if I hadn't had a partner I could trust. I would have fallen and probably hurt myself seriously," says Chris. People who work in the circus love the risks and the thrill of their profession. Broken bones are part of the job. "I just wish they didn't take so long to mend," Chris explains. He earns 500$ per week, but it is certainly not easy money.

There are only two hundred combat soldiers in the British Army who can parachute into the sea, drive for hours in freezing waters and then spy in enemy territory successfully. James Rennie is one of them. This isn't his real name, because his own identity has to be kept secret." It's very exciting job, but it's also tough and dangerous. You have to be courageous, "says James. It takes five long years of training before such a soldier can go on a special mission. According to James, the toughest part of the business is spying. "I've been on a lot of missions that involve this kind of work, if the enemy had caught us, they would have killed us. "45000 $ per year might sound like a lot, but few people would risk their lives for less.

Most patients are thankful for the care they get from their doctors, but when it comes to animals it's a different story. Every vet knows that animals are much more likely to turn round and bite rather than thank them. Steve Divers is an experienced vet and has been bitten by countless cats and dogs. With more dangerous animals, though, he takes special care. For example, with poisonous snakes, he keeps them in a cloth bag and uses the metal instrument to keep the head down and the teeth away from the hands. "If I didn't know how to handle some animals, I would probably have permanent scars by now," Steve says. Although it takes many years of study to become a vet, it is a very rewarding and well-paid career. "All animals in need must be treated. I would never ignore a sick animal, even if it was dangerous enough to kill me," says Steve.

4. What are positive and negative points of each job are?
5. Explain the words and phrases in in bold. Then, choose any three and make sentences.
6. If you had to do one of the three jobs mentioned in the texts, which would you choose and why? Which would you definitely not choose? Why?
